NEW BRITAIN — Dan and Danny St. Laurent are celebrating 32 years of providing quality remodeling and any other type of service their clients need with their business, Jack of All Trades Remodeling.

“It started as an idea from my wife, Nancy, and has since become a household name 32 years later,” said St. Laurent, who runs the business with his son Danny.

Jack of All Trades is a full-service remodeling company that does everything from economical projects, carpentry and tile to high-end bathrooms and kitchens.

The company can do all types of repairs from sheetrock to plumbing to electrical and everything in between. Jack of All Trades was voted Home Improvement Contractor

Their clients treat them like family, Dan St. Laurent said. “Not only do we perform quality work, but we take pride in our work and work in their homes as if their home was our own home,” he said.

Dan St. Laurent and his brother, Tim, started the business on a whim 32 years ago after they were laid off from their jobs.

Dan St. Laurent was a mechanical engineer and his brother, who has since died, was a chemical engineer. They began buying properties in New Britain and remodeling the buildings to rent. The business then began taking in remodeling work from clients in Hartford County, including New Britain and surrounding towns.

More than three decades later, the company is still flourishing, with St. Laurent’s son, Danny, who majored in accounting and finance in college, working side by side with his father.

“One of the proudest things to me about our business is the addition of my son Danny,” Dan St. Laurent said. “Over the past few years, Danny has made major impacts on our business.”

Danny St. Laurent chose to be his father’s partner over work at a Fortune 500 company, the older St. Laurent said. Now the two tackle all types of home improvements projects together, including serving clients who are seniors who need maintenance on their homes.

“Due to his energy, spirit, persistence and vision, he is helping to bring our company to a higher plane,” Dan St. Laurent said.

“There’s a difference between us and most other developers,” Dan St. Laurent said. “We treat our clients’ homes as if they are our own. We care about the details and what our clients want. Nothing is more important to us than quality and having our clients trust us. We are professionals with a heart.”

“Our family is important to us and we treat our clients like family,” he said.
