Manafort Brothers: Maintaining the family legacy

By THE HERALD STAFF

PLAINVILLE — Over the course of its 100-year history, Manafort Brothers Inc. has established itself as one of the biggest contractors in New England.

The company recently marked its 100 years in business but the history of the company goes back through four generations of the Manafort family.

“When my grandfather started the business in 1919, it was called New Britain House Wrecking Company,” Jon Manafort said of his grandfather, James Manafort.

Originally, the family-owned company focused on taking buildings apart and selling the materials. In the 1940s, brothers Anthony, Frank, John and Paul Manafort Sr. took over the company and started using more mechanical tools and equipment like cranes.

The brothers officially changed the name of the company to Manafort Brothers in 1946. Another two decades passed until the third generation of the family took over — Jim Sr., Frank Jr. and Jon Manafort.

Under the leadership of these three in the 1960s. Manafort

Manafort Brothers in Plainville recently marked 100 years in business and is one of the biggest contractors in New England.

Brothers continued to expand its focus to construction work including concrete, civil and utility, demolition, abatement and remediation, highway and bridge, nuclear decommissioning, rail and mass transit. While the company is now just over the border from New Britain in Plainville, it remains involved in the city and the family's legacy of good work in the area continues. For more information on Manafort Brothers, go to www.manafort.com or call the corporate office at 860-229-4853.
